Imagine an empty pool. Then imagine smashing everything into it – a totality that eventually overflows the centre, the periphery, the whole thing.

States of Flux evolves around four sites as its decentred stages: a hotel in the tourist resort Sunny Beach on the Black Sea; the rooftop premises of Swimming Pool in Sofia, with an empty pool; a hot spring in a mountain village near the city; and, far from the South of Europe, a self-service laundry in Frankfurt am Main. These semi-public places form the spine of an imaginary geography of flux.

The last stage, The Token, is in Frankfurt – a location with a thriving global late-capitalist economy. The mirror facades that surround us are those of a speculative financial apparatus that grows ever more elusive through its obsession with the production of fictions about the future. With such fictions governing our reality, how can we claim our vulnerable presence?

States of Flux: The Token is the second part of the series of exhibitions States of Flux, curated by Viktoria Draganova and Gergana Todorova and hosted by Swimming Pool, Sofia.

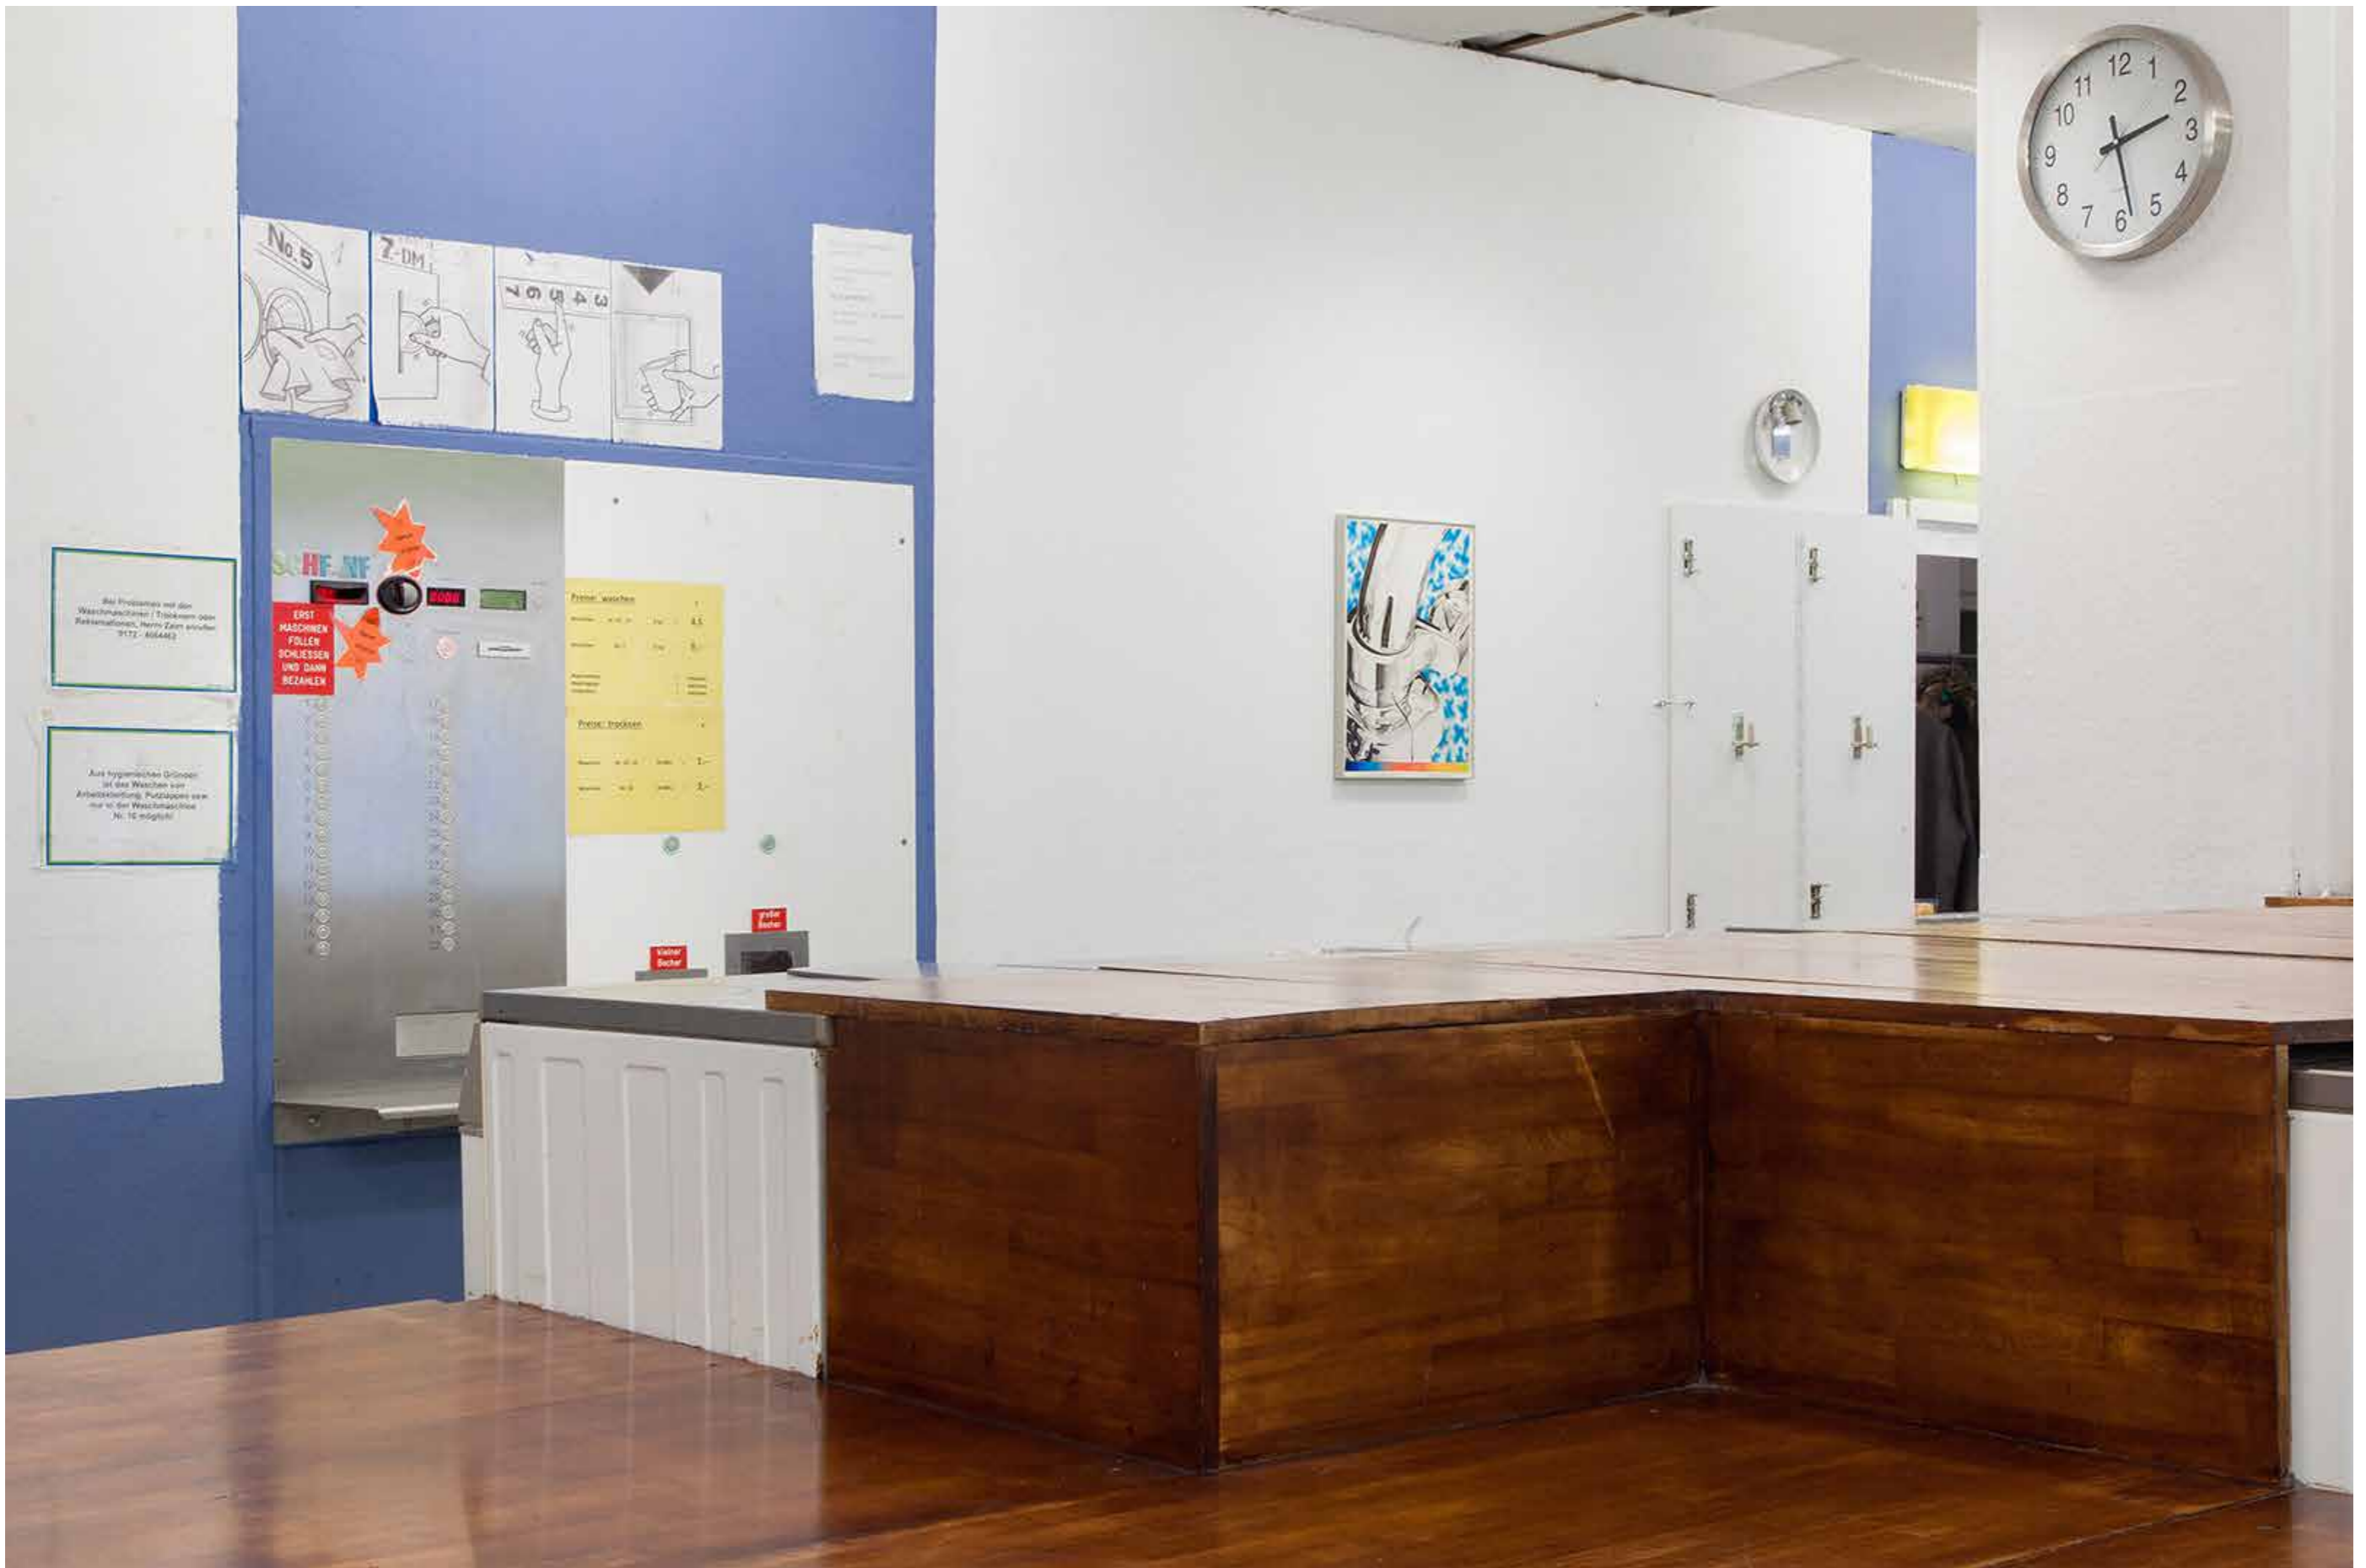

The exhibition took place at the public Waschsalon in Eckenheimer Landstraße 65 in Frankfurt/Main from 6 until 8 October 2016.

The exhibition series is supported by: Municipality of Sofia Program “Culture”, Iaspis, Ifa Institut für Auslandsbeziehungen, OCA and Goethe-institut Sofia.
